

MULE COLT DAY

GREEN BOWLING,

Many Mules Here But Named as County Campaign Chairman.

Last Monday was known as mule colt day in Lancaster and they were here from every section of the county and many from adjoining counties, but for some reason few sales were made, the buyers contending the owners were asking too much, while the owners claimed that the buyers were bidding too low. We were unable to tell who was to blame but we will say that very few high class mules were offered.

A few sold for $100 and on up to $100, the latter being a very fine one and was bought by Honta Brothers of Harrodsburg.

Aged mules were dull and only a few sold. Ollie Johnson sold two fine plantation horses to Mr. Letton Vermont, of Paris for $650.00. R. L. Arnold sold a team of horse mules to Georgia parties for $175.00.

Cracks At Creation.

Apparently everyone is yelling "pride" at everybody but me.

High cost of living. You bet! Life is just one expensive cat after another.

The high cost of babies, it seems, is interfering seriously with the marriage market.

We suggest, in the interest of economy, the elimination of the parties in the H. C. L.

The soap box orator flies away in a swirl of time, but dispenses many a gem of wisdom to his fitting.

Men of anarchist tendencies are not needed in this country. Hell or hell is the best place for them.

Teddy the Second does not like the Bolsheviks. He has adopted the slogan of "Meet 'Em Head On."

"The only pearl I ever found was wife," remarked a local citizen the other day. Can you name him?

Teachers Money.

Miss Jessie Higgins wishes us to say that she is ready to pay all teachers for their first month salary, provided they have their report signed by both trustee and chairman and on file in her office.

Next Week.

Watch for the advertisement of the Joseph Mercantile Company, which will appear next week on the personal page of the paper, and each week thereafter throughout the remainder of the year.

Carolina Tobacco.

Mr. Woods Walker brought to this place a sample of North Carolina tobacco that recently sold over the breaks there for 90 cents a pound.

It is very much like the Garrard county product but is lacking in the length.

Wind Storm.

A slight wind storm struck Lancaster last Friday just after the close of the circus. In the afternoon the tent was blown down and one of the marionettes slightly burnt, resulting in no show at night. Other damage was due to the water tower of the Ice Plant and about one hundred dollars damage to the Garrard Tobacco Warehouse.

The Work Grows.

Standardization of poultry, which means one breed for each county, is now being put into operation in 85 counties in Kentucky under the direction of the Extension Division of the College of Agriculture. This past spring 161,000 purchased eggs were distributed in these 85 counties. It is predicted that 750,000

purchased eggs of standard breeds will be sold for setting next season.

Enrollment Was Big.

Last week long lines of young men and young women waited for a chance to register at the State University. It was a busy time for all concerned, but it was an extremely pleasant time because the war was a thing of the past and youth was again knocking at the door of opportunity in the good old fashioned way. The enrollment

during the first few days proved considerably that 1919-20 will be a banner year for old State

now.

Boys And Girls Win.

Again this season the boys and girls in the Pig Clubs have taken high honors over veteran breeders at the State Fair which has just closed. The Junior Championship

in Hampshire classes went to Wm.

J. Mamby, Jr., of Latrange, who is only eleven years old. In the Breeders' Junior Sow Pig Class for

Durocs, the club members took first, second and third with 37 showing.

Leona Downs, Cox's Creek, took first with her gilt Down's Best.

Chas. M. Wheeler, Huechel, got second place with Taxpayer's Minute.

George Hayden, Springfield, secured the third prize with Hayden's

Cardinal Queen.

CITY PROPERTY

Land Demand And Selling Rapidly.

Speculators hawks or memory of recent inflation but there has been a demand for city property at present. The number of lots during the last few weeks has been unprecedented.

Last Saturday afternoon, Mr. D.

A. Thomas sold for Kinnard Sisters their property on Danville Street, to Mr. R. Zinner for $9,025.

On the same afternoon he sold the property of Anderson Brothers to Mr. Mike

Forster for $15,000. The Lewis property owned by J. W. Smith and the Endry property also owned by Mr.

Smith was sold to Swanson, the former to J. E. Thompson for $8,000 and the Endry property to Mr. Ira

Holtzclaw for $6,000.

The Haselden property owned by

G. C. Walker was sold by the United Beauty and Development Co. of which Mr. J. S.

Haselden is manager, was sold to Dr.

Prentiss Walker for $6,000 and the outfit across the street to the Baptist church for $1,000.

All of this property was sold at public auction and all of these transaction sales advertised in this issue of the Record. Read them and keep them to the dates.

Next Tuesday.

The live stock sale of Farmer and Son's appears in this issue. In the sale will be included 113 good grade ewes that will be sold worth the money. Bring the jay.

Republican Speaking.

Hon. George W. Colvin, of Springfield, candidate on the Republican ticket for Superintendent of Public Institutions, spoke at the court house here last Friday afternoon and made a good speech from his standpoint.

He is a pleasant and fluent speaker and would have had a larger audience had it not been for the circus which was on parade at the time he was called to speak and naturally the crowd followed the parade to the circus grounds.

BIGGEST LAND SALE EVER CONDUCTED IN KENTUCKY.

FAIRMOUTH RUSSELL CAVE PIKE, NEAR LEXINGTON

1541 ACRES OF HAGGIN LAND SUB-

DIVIDED WILL BE SOLD AT AUCTION THURSDAY, OCT. 2nd,

at 10:30 A. M. Rain or Shine.

This large farm has 5 miles of pike frontage, and owing to the enormous investment in improvements made by the late Mr. J. B. Haggin, it will be necessary to have several farms containing about 250 to 300 acres, but we will also have some small tracts and will in a few days publish a map showing how this property is subdivided. This map will show also, all the expensive plumbing and water lines that spread like network over the farm. Each tract we sell will have the running water thereon, and each purchaser will receive a deed to his interest in the water system. This magnificent never failing water system is separate and apart from any other part of the famous Haggin land; it has its own 25,000 gallon tank, its own large gasoline engine, and its own source of supply in a spring the bottom of which has never been found. We bought this system complete with the farm, and you get it without any reservations, all purchasers sharing in its ownership with only a nominal annual charge for maintenance and operation.

This farm has about 900 acres in old blue grass sod, also a lot of virgin soil; is fenced and water-gapped throughout with the well-known Haggin type; and listen: Has 5 main dwellings, twenty small houses, seven $5000.00 tobacco barns, 11 fine Haggin stock barns, silos, etc., all equipped with running water. We have 12 small houses on the Ferguson pike which adjoins and are on 5 acre lots; these also equipped with running water, and will be sold separately and not with any tract or as a whole.

Although we have had numerous requests for prices on this land, we positively will not sell any of it at private sale, "then run it through the auction sale," as has been suggested by friends who haven't had the experience in the auction sale business that we have. When you are the last bidder on one of these tracts, you will certainly get a deed and it will be yours to hold and enjoy as long as you live (unless you price it) and to increase in value from time to time.

For further information and description, see later ads, but in the meantime if you wish to see the property take it up with C. N. Manning or S. A. Wallace, at the Security Trust Company, or O. O. Carpenter, or S. H. Johnson on the farm, or the undersigned.

Mother Shipton Told of Aviation In 1488.

The following, which is known as "Mother Shipton's Prophecy," was first published in 1488, republished in 1641 and again in 1875. It will be noticed that all the events predicted in it except the last two lines have come to pass:

"Carriages without horses shall go;

"And accidents fill the world with woe.

Around the world thought shall fly,

In the twinkling of an eye:

Water shall yet more wonders do:

How strange, yet shall be true,

The world upside down shall be,

And gold be found at root of tree,

Through hills men shall ride,

And no horse or ass be at his side,

Under water men shall walk,

Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk,

In the air men shall be seen,

In white, in black, in green,

Iron in water shall float

As easy as a wooden boat,

Gold shall be found, and shown

In a land that is not known.

Fire and water shall wonders do,

England shall at last admit a Jew.

The world to an end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one."

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

The people of Kentucky are in favor of the League of Nations, there is no more doubt of that than there is that the Republicans are gum-shoeing about that matter over the State and remaining silent on what mothers and fathers of American boys regard as the greatest issue this country has faced in a century—the issue of whether there shall be an international tribunal that will make wars in the future, if not impossible, at least difficult. The Democratic platform and the Democratic candidates warmly endorse the League of Nations, while Republican Senators fighting the treaty which is the hope of the world for future peace, have made it necessary for the hard-worked President of the United States to leave Washington and make an appeal directly to the people, telling them the truth about the treaty to counteract the misrepresentation of Republican speakers in the Senate of the United States. Let the people of Kentucky take warning from these Republican opponents of the President in the Senate. Let them take warning from this action of a political party willing to play politics while the world starves and is on fire with conditions of unrest that will not be stilled until the great American Republic, whose entrants into the war definitely sounded the doom of German junkerism and ended the hope of Hun world-domination, has definitely acted on the peace treaty and notify these politicians in the Senate as well as in Kentucky that it is not a time to play politics when the world is afire and starving. One way to rebuke these Republican opponents of President Wilson is to elect James D. Black, an advocate of the League of Nations, Governor of Kentucky, November 4th, with every man on the ticket with him.

PROFITEERING
IN KENTUCKY.

The investigation by the commission appointed by Governor Black of the high cost of living in Kentucky has had at least one concrete result and that is proof that S. Thurston Ballard, Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor and millionaire miller of Louisville, has been charging the people of his home city and State $1.10 a barrel more for flour than the people of far away Louisiana. It has been reported that, in addition to this discount given the people of New Orleans of $1.10 below the price he is willing to sell flour to the people of Louisville, the Ballard mills also pay the freight on the flour to New Orleans, which as everybody knows, is quite some distance from Louisville, involving a freight rate of hardly less than 50 cents a barrel, though this paper has not had the time to look up that rate.

If this is not profiteering with a vengeance, and with the people of Kentucky as its victim, we should like to know what it is, and how much slowness can be credited to the Republican party platform plank on that question.

HOGS TOP MARKET

DR. PORTER

To Preach At Gilead.

Dr. J. W. Porter, who is pastor of the First Baptist church of Lexington, Ky., is going to preach at Gilead on Thursday October 2nd, at eight o'clock P. M. On Friday he will preach twice, at the eleven o'clock hour and at eight o'clock in the evening. Also on Saturday, October fourth he will preach twice, at eleven o'clock in the morning, and at eight in the evening.

We are unable to announce the text for each service, but the sermons are to be uplifting, you cannot afford to miss a single one of his sermons. Every one is invited to attend all of the services. Come while you have this rare opportunity to hear one of the ablest of God's servants. He ranks among the foremost pulpit orators of the southland.

We are going to have some good congregational singing—come and help sing.

New Real Estate Firm.

The Victory Realty Company is the latest real estate firm out and they are doing business with a vengeance. The firm is composed of S. A. Walker, who is the general manager and T. Carlton Elkin, sales manager. This firm recently pulled off big sale in Pulaski county selling 105 acres the total amount being over $16,000. Both of these gentlemen are fine wire and those placing their farms in their hands for sale will get good results. They are carrying an advertisement regularly in this paper. Read it and see what they say.

Bourne-Poynter.

Considerable surprise was occasioned here Friday afternoon, when relatives received word that Miss Hannah Lloyd Bourne and Mr. Thomas Austin Poynter, had eloped to Jellico, Tenn., where they were married.

They had been sweethearts only a few weeks, and kept their secret so well minded about getting married, that even their most intimate friends did not know of their intentions.

The bride is the beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Bourne, and is well fitted for the duties she has assumed.

The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Poynter, and is a very deserving young man, and is a promising young business man of this city. He made his home in Omaha, Nebraska, until several months ago, he returned to Garrard County, where he met and won one of Lancaster's sweetest girls.

Estes-Townsend.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Estes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Anderson Estes, to Mr. George Townsend, of Clayton, Michigan, was solemnized last Saturday morning at the home of Rev. C. D. Strother, he performing the ceremony. Immediately after the marriage the happy couple left for Clayton, Michigan, where they will make their future home.

The charming bride has been the competent and popular book-keeper at the Garrard Bank and Trust Company for the past year and has made many friends, all of whom will join heartily with the Record in extending her their best wishes for a long and happy life. The groom is a splendid young man, having served honorably in the service of his country overseas, having received his discharge a few months ago. He is to be congratulated on winning the girl of his choice and we wish for both that every day through life may be as bright and happy as on their wedding morn.

Foley-Tuttle.

Miss Lizzie Foley of lower Garrard, and Mr. Charlie Tuttle of Harrodsburg surprised their many friends last Wednesday morning by going to Lancaster to the home of Rev. Palmer, and were united in marriage.

Miss Foley is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Foley, and the man of her choice is to be congratulated on winning such an ideal life companion. She is a popular and lovely young lady and counts her friends by the score.

Mr. Tuttle is a native of Knox county, and a young man of sterling qualities. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple motored to Stanford and took the train for Harrodsburg, where they are now with the grooms parents. ## Lane.

The friends of Mrs. Ed Lane were grieved to hear of her death, which occurred at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Merida, last Tuesday morning Sept. 16th, at 11:35, of typhoid fever.

She was the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Merida, and was 26 years of age. Eight years ago she married Mr. Ed Lane. Besides the grief stricken husband, parents, sisters and brothers, she leaves three little sons, who will sorely miss the love and tender care of a mother.

Mrs. Lane was a lovely Christian character and loved by all who knew her. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved ones in their dark hour but may they look to the Heavenly Father for comfort.

Broaddus.

Mr. John C. Broaddus, a splendid citizen of Garrard county, living four miles of Lancaster on the Buckeye pike, died suddenly Thursday morning at 11:30 of Bright's disease.

His passing away brought grief and sorrow to the entire community. Mr. Broaddus had not been well for several months, but his death was a shock to his family, relatives and friends. He was a good neighbor, a loving husband and father, devoted to his home and family.

He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Broaddus of Kirksville. In 1881 he married Miss Malinda Turner of Madison County, where they lived until 10 years ago, when they moved to Garrard County. Eight children survive them, Mrs. W. T. Prewitt of Pungdale, Illinois, Mrs. Marcus White, Misses Anna Mae, Lula and Jean Broaddus, Messrs. Clay, John C. and Thompson, and his parents Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Broaddus of Kirksville, and one sister, Mrs. John Ross, and one brother, Mr. W. D. Broaddus, both of Madison Co.

The entire community sympathized deeply with the bereaved ones in their loss. The funeral services were held at the grave in the Lancaster Cemetery by Rev. H. A. Davies, and he was laid to rest beneath a mound of beautiful flowers.

"What's the matter with your sons? They sent me a package out here and there wasn't nothing in it but a picture of Paul and Billie," she said.

Burmeese Marriages.

A curious idea among the Burmeese is that people born on the same day of the week must not marry. Hence each girl carries a record of her birthday in her name, each day buying a letter belonging to it, and all children are called by a name that begins with that letter.

Story of the Cable Car.

On August 11, 1873, the first cable car in the world was put into operation in San Francisco. The inventor of the cable system was Andrew Hallidie. The cable cars were introduced into San Francisco eight years after their appearance on the Pacific coast and in 1887 were adopted in New York, Washington and Philadelphia and afterward in London.

Tattoo Removal.

Various methods for removing tattoos are employed, the best of which consists in going over the tattoo marks with a strong solution of tannin using the ordinary needle and forceps. Tannin is a strong acid and is used with silver nitrate or croton. Nitric acid, salicylic acid and glycerine chloroform and a mixture of peach glycerine, the hydrochloric acid and water are other substances used for this purpose.

Fair Play Imperative.

"Business is business, as in all workers should do their work, but should remember that those in authority have rights also and are entitled to fair treatment from the people they employ. Therefore one must learn to be punctual, neat, active and kind to the employer." The employee who swerves from this system is not playing fair with employer and certainly should keep silent on the question of equal rights.—L. P. Whipple.

With the universal adoption of the automobile and the more recent perfection of individual electric lighting and power plants, her homelife has undergone an epochal change.

The toil and monotony which attached itself to woman's place in rural life, long has been proverbial. Removed from the city the country woman for the most part was without the scope of those many advantages which during the last century have come through invention and development.

FLORY

BY MILDRED WHITE.

"Silly twaddle," remarked James Comstock, disgustedly, and laid the book aside.

"Whose 'twaddle,'" asked a sweet voice near him, "is it?"

James glanced at the cover.

"By Flory," he quoted contemptuously. "Flory is exactly the sort of person one would expect to touch upon her subjects like a butterfly among the flowers, with insubstance or ready to hold."

"Haven't you," asked the girl at his side, "imitated some of Flory's poetical phraseology? Now, I know a man who is enraptured over the little books, considers them the acme of art. Certainly they sell well."

James Comstock turned to look into the pleasant face upturned to his own. Like various other guests at Mrs. Van Houton's house party, he was exceedingly curious concerning this new arrival in their social midst.

The rest of the crowd had been known to each other, either by name or reputation for years. Rhoda Kent was one of Mrs. Van Houton's devotees. To use her son's expression, her mother had "sprung a new one," and she was delighted in her young friend's reserve. The most favored had been able to learn nothing of Rhoda's past, present or future from her own lips.

It was the unusual charm of her personality which caused deep interest upon all sides, and much conjecture. Her clothing, though in good taste, was so independently simple that many wondered if Mrs. Van Houton had taken on a protege.

James Comstock, being acceptably the most interesting man in the set, was naturally her favorite. In fact, during the days of proximity in the old house his heart had known its first serious affection.

James, the heretofore invulnerable, was, as Billy Van Houton said, "decidedly hard hit."

Never before, he gloomily admitted to himself, had face or voice of woman haunted the nightly hours which should be devoted to healthful slumber. So James was justified in possessing more than the usual share of curiosity concerning the red life of the winsome Rhoda.

"Perhaps," he said in answer to her defense of the book discussed, "this 'Flory' may say more, in a right manner, than I am clever enough to grasp. But, fancy, for instance, being married to such a dreamer. Poor husband of Flory! With his wife always soaring above the blue. She isn't so bad at rhyme, though, I'll admit; seems to have a number of little verses scattered through here and there, with a bar of music to start them off. Helps to sell, I suppose. Makes the book look easy to read."

Miss Kent nodded laughingly.

"But you would not want to be the suffering husband who must listen to his wife singing those things around the house," she said.

"Heaven forbid!" James plausibly ejaculated. And the lovely girl at his side arose in response to Mrs. Van Houton's call.

"Come here, Rhoda," cried that merry person. "Here are half a dozen bored people wishing to be entertained. My hope lies in you."

James Comstock gazed after the graceful figure regretfully. The glance she threw back at him was strangely disquieting. For days he had been joyously secure in a consciousness of the girl's preference. Unconquerable discouragement came upon him. Rhoda's eyes had gazed at him reproachfully, her lips had closed firmly, as though in displeasure. Then presently he heard her voice in song, as she accompanied herself upon the piano.

It was little Scotch tune that the girl played and the words sounded vaguely familiar. Comstock leaning forward, listening attentively, found that voice and tune thrilled him with inexplicable tenderness. Where—had he—heard—the words?

Idly his gaze fell upon the opened book of "Flory." Then he knew. It was one of the despised Flory's verses that his beloved was singing. And after a round of involuntary hand-clapping he heard Mrs. Van Houton's triumphant announcement:

"I had not intended to tell you for we have had such fun keeping our secret. But Rhoda Kent is Flory; as you have guessed, with those delightful looks to her credit."

Comstock sat staring dully at the book in his hand long after silence proclaimed that Rhoda's audience had departed. Bitterly he recurred his recent condemning conversation, with its fervent "Heaven forbid!" that a wife such as she should be his own. Well, he had done for himself this time, he bitterly reflected, and this time was all that counted in the world.

"If you please," asked Rhoda severely, "may I have that book of 'Silly twaddle'?"

Wretchedly he looked up into the lovely face above his.

"And—I was going to ask you to be my wife."

"Heaven forbid!" murmured Rhoda. "A wife floating around in the blue." Her voice broke in soft uncontrollable laughter. Eagerly he caught at her hands.

"I will drop the name 'Flory,'" Rhoda said later; "Mrs. James Comstock will give to the book the proper dignity which it deserves."

164 ACRES, located on good pike, Paint Lick High School District. Practically new 8 room dwelling, a fine young orchard, watered by the best springs I ever saw, running over large tanks during the dry weather. Land is good quality and is almost level and fine for farming. Good tobacco barn that will house 8 to 10 acres tobacco. A farm that should bring $25.00 per acre more than asked, listed for short time only at $150.00 per acre.

YOU HAD BETTER GET A HOME WHILE YOU CAN, there are now three buyers for every farm on the market, and you can see from the short time I have in which to offer these, that the owners expect to withdraw them from the market, and with each withdrawal at least three are left homeless. The situation is becoming alarming and if you ever expect to own a foot of mother earth, you had better get in line. It costs you nothing to look these over, and if you will come to Paint Lick or call me, I will be glad to have a car take you to these dandy small homes and let you look them over. Paint Lick vicinity real estate has been worked the least of any neighborhood in Madison or Garrard County and the result, offers you better values for the money today than any other place you can go.

POTATOES PROPERLY STORED FOR WINTER

Approximately One-Third of Crop is Marketed in Fall.

Reserve Supply Must Be Protected From Extremes of Heat and Cold—Provide Sufficient Ventilation and Avoid Moisture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Potatoes properly stored should not sustain a loss throughout the winter season of more than 5 per cent, and under exceptionally good conditions not more than 3 or 4 per cent. The maximum return from the crop after it is produced depends on the care with which the potatoes are harvested, stored, graded, sacked, and the ability of the grower to sell at the most advantageous time. Approximately one-third of the potato crop is harvested at harvest time, and the remainder is stored as a reserve supply for winter and spring. It is physically impossible, as well as economically undesirable, to attempt to market the entire crop in the autumn, and the only way in which potatoes can be handled successfully, so as to insure a uniform supply, is to provide sufficient storage on the farm or at the shipping station for from 60 to 75 per cent of the crop.

Various types of storage places are now in use, ranging from pits or cheaply constructed dugouts to large substantially built storage houses. Plans for the construction of storage houses are given in the department's Farmers' Bulletin 817.

For successful storage, the tubers must be protected from extremes of cold and heat; a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees F. is considered satisfactory. Sufficient ventilation must be provided to remove foul air and excessive moisture. The storage house must be so constructed as to make it possible to exclude the light, as the tuber quality of potatoes quickly deteriorates in the light.

The tubers should be dry and reasonably free from dirt when put into storage; an excess of moisture or soil increases the amount of heat in newly stored potatoes. The soil tends to hold the stones between the tubers, thus cutting off air circulation, and helping to retain heat that would otherwise escape. All diseased, badly cut, or bruised tubers should be removed from the crop before putting it into storage.

It is common practice for commercial growers and shippers to store potatoes in bins to a depth of 10 to 15 feet. This is almost certain to entail a much heavier shrinkage loss than when stored to a depth of not more than 6 feet. The heavier shrinkage is the result of the greater amount of heat generated by a large pile of potatoes which results in a higher amount of moisture loss as well as a heavier loss from decay, as heat and moisture both help to develop organisms causing tuber rot. Frequently the losses sustained when the potatoes are stored under these conditions reach 25 per cent and where rigid care has not been exercised to remove all diseased tubers before storing the crop the loss is even greater. It is advisable, therefore, to pile the potatoes not greater than 5 or 6 feet deep, and the floor dimensions of the bin should not be greater than 12x12 feet unless provided with a series of ventilating shafts or division walls for the escape of moisture and heat.

RAISE RABBITS FOR PROFITS

Little Domestic Animals Are Easy to Handle and Remarkably Free From Disease.

Rabbit raising on a backyard scale is not an experiment. Thousands of small industries in this country are producing meat crops regularly for family tables. These domestic animals are easily raised and remarkably free from disease when properly cared for.

The Belgian hare is one of the best rabbits for table use. It weighs more than most breeds, develops rapidly, Female Flemish Giant.

and the quality of the meat is superior to all the others. The Flemish giant is a Belgian hare bred exclusively for large size, with the result that the meat is coarser and less delicate in flavor. These characteristics are considered by some persons as undesirable, but this is largely a matter of individual taste.

EXPERIMENT IN STEER FEED

Pennsylvania Station Makes Successful Test With Silage, Stover and Linseed Oil Meal.

Twelve head of two-year-old steers were fed at the Pennsylvania experiment station on a ration of 41.00 pounds of corn silage, 2.12 pounds of shredded corn stover and 3.02 pounds of linseed oil meal per head daily. They made an average daily gain of 2.22 pounds per head at a cost of $18.84 per hundredweight. The cattle were valued at $14.40 per hundred, making a net profit of $20.98 per head.

DICK'S DIPLOMACY By ADELAIDE R. KEMP.

Mollie stood by the little white gate gazing down the road, grass grown and tree shaded.

She was just about to return to the house when the figure of a small boy coming up the road, holding a small flag and whistling "Yankee Doodle," attracted her attention. As he came nearer she saw that he belonged to the new family only recently moved into the big house on the hill. The strong feeling of loneliness and her desire for human companionship caused her to smile and say:

"Hello, little! What's your name?"

"Richard Winthrop Hetherington, Jr." was the response.

"Where have you been, Richard, with your flag?"

The boy's face brightened as he answered: "I'm down to the station to see some of the soldier boys coming home. My uncle will be coming home any day now." He paused a moment for breath and then continued:

"Why didn't you go down? Haven't you got any sweetheart?"

"No, I haven't, Richard. I guess you will have to find one."

"All right, I'll try," answered the boy promptly, and then saluting, he shouldered his flag and continued up the road whistling a martial air. Mollie watched him out of sight. She knew he considered himself a whole band leading a company of returning heroes.

Two days later with all the fever of spring cleaning in her blood, Mollie donned her longest apron and with scrubbing brush and broom made an attack on the past winter's germs and dust. Up on the step-ladder in her bright little kitchen she was scouring pan with her usual vigor when a voice from the open doorway startled her so that she nearly fell from her perch.

"Excuse me! I hope I haven't frightened you, but I knocked and couldn't seem to make anyone hear."

Mollie, clambering down as quickly as possible, saw a young officer in olive-drab uniform, overseas cap in one hand and battered suitcase in the other. He was bronzed from exposure and rather careworn, but even at that Mollie decided he was very good to look at. There was a moment's pause and then he continued:

"Would you direct me to the Hetheringtons? I seem to have lost my way."

"Oh!" Mollie exclaimed, "You must be Richard Winthrop Hetherington, Jr.'s uncle." Then she stopped and blushed scarlet.

"That sure is my number," laughed the young fellow. "My home is in Michigan, but I thought I would stay here for a short time before going on. You must be acquainted with my young nephew."

"I just met him the other evening," said Mollie, and she smiled reminiscently. "They live in that big white house on the hill."

Still John Hetherington lingered. "I could come down some evening while I'm here and tell you some great stories about the war if you would like to hear them," he said finally.

Mollie clasped her hands. "Oh, I wish you would! I don't know anyone who has been over there, and I have wanted so much to hear it directly from some one who was in the big battles." After this, John, finding no new excuse to linger, picked up his suitcase and departed.

The weeks flew rapidly by. As John Hetherington explained to his relatives, the peace and beauty of the New England hills were far better for his health than the rush and bustle of the busy West. It apparently took him a good many evenings to tell all his adventures "over there" to Mollie. It also quite often occupied his Sundays. One evening late in August the two sat rather silently in the rose-covered porch of Mollie's little cottage. But it was a silence that contained all speech. The moon had risen in all her glory over the distant purple hills. As John looked up the road he saw his young nephew approaching, whistling as usual. When he reached the white gate he stopped and hung over it to gaze at the pair on the porch.

"Well, little scoundrel, where are you going?" asked John as a general opening to the conversation.

The boy looked gravely at his uncle.

"I'm going down to the store to get some mills for dad. He said he asked you to get them, but the place would be closed before you ever reached there, because you wouldn't ever be able to get past Mollie's house."

There was a moment of embarrassed silence, and then John, to relieve the tension, asked:

"And what did you say to that, Dickie?"

"Oh," answered the lad, slowly looking from one to the other. "I told him that I guessed it was all right, 'cause Mollie asked me to get her a sweetheart, and I thought you'd do." Having delivered himself of this piece of eloquence, Richard Winthrop Hetherington, Jr., resumed his journey southward. The moon very kindly went behind a cloud at this juncture and John turned Mollie's scarlet face toward him.

"Will I do, little sweetheart?" he asked in a low voice.

And Mollie looked in the eyes she had learned to love so dearly, blushing a low "yen" as she did her blushing face on John's broad shoulder.

Though the rector arose in quest of her, Molle was gone. Which branching path she had chosen he did not know. But he went back to his seat beneath the oak to sit again and dream of her. Then at last, Eleanor brought Molle's fascinating game to an unexpected end.

"Mr. Sutherland, the rector is coming to dinner at five tonight," she said.

"I cannot be back from our motor trip until six. Be here to welcome him, Molle, and do make a pleasant impression, dear. Mr. Sutherland's opinion is worth while."

Molle sighed. So she was to have no memory romance after all, and to the man she would be but a common place girl, in a commonplace modern home.

Freda was admiring the tall figure of the rector as she reached the foot of the stairs. It was impossible for Molle to retreat. In desperation she slipped into a hall closet beneath the stairs.

Molle knew after a suffocating lapse in the closet that he had made himself comfortable for a long while. Hopefully Molle fumbled along the wall finding there evidently a muddle of velveting apron. Frantically she stuffed her hair into the stretched apron's crown, her feet, sandals and all, went into the shoes, then Molle opened the closet door.

The rector stared and Molle stared at a reflection of herself in the mirror. Freda's borrowed apron was far from clean. Molle's hair was escaping from Freda's cap. Speechlessly, she fled up the stairs.

It was Freda who knocked presently at Molle's door.

"That man," she said, disgustedly, "says he must speak to 'other maid.' He don't believe me that I'm the only maid. You go tell him."

With the brighter light of table and desk still in her eyes, Molle came, very neatly dressed, down the stairs. Eleanor returning later, was astonished to hear her rector happily pronouncing:

"The going to see that you stay now, that I have you at last, Molle dear."

—THAT ENDS WELL

By EDNA FOREST.

Molle had been playing a game, a very interesting and secret game, and she had never been so happy in all her life. The game was "Hide and Seek," of an entirely new, and romantic nature, and Molle returned from her last exploit in high, bon-silious spirits.

Eleanor, the married sister, whom she visited, must not suspect the delightful pastime of her summer afternoons. Eleanor, strictly conventional would be horror stricken. The secret game had begun by chance, and as Molle's side was the advantage,

When she hid arisen early one in biting morning slipping silently down past closed room to dewy garden bench, she had intended to take but a brief dip in the sun, and when Molle, despoiling herself among the waves, looked down the isolated bench, she fancied herself monarch, or perhaps monarch "poss," of all she surveyed.

As she sat upon a great stone in the early sunshine, she saw however that another as ambitious as she, was swimming about in the blue.

Molle, in embarrassment, darted again into the water, going further out than she had heretofore ventured, and being roughly brought to her senses by the swimmer himself.

"It is dangerous for you to be out here alone," he said. "I am returning to the hotel. You'd better come back."

Molle suddenly weakened, respectively breathlessly, his help.

When the two reached the shore she rested in the warm sand, thanked him, beginning in her pretty way a sort of "holding" conversation.

The man at least was bold by it, for he made no motion to carry out his intention of returning to the hotel. And this was Molle's advantage from the beginning. She recognized at once her rescuer, a certain noted craftsman from the city, whose arrival at the resort had been heralded a few days before. Eleanor indeed, was an attendant at his church.

But the craftsman himself was left unenlightened as to Molle's knowledge of his identity and ignorant of her own. It was as they were pleasantly chattering that she waved her hand in quick farewell, and literally disappeared.

Mr. Sutherland, Eleanor innocently regretted, was returning to the city at the end of the fortnight and she feared she would have no opportunity of entertaining him at the cottage.

Molle, in her secret planning, decided to completely disappear from Mr. Sutherland's life before the end of his fortnight, leaving to him ever after but a romantic, and she hoped, a pleasing memory.

So, she was seated demurely reading in the rector's favorite book as he came down into the glen. Her dress was blue cotton, her white collar and cuffs neat and plain.

Her white eyes expressed surprise at the rector's appearance. His keen eyes expressed pleasure. When Molle would have politely departed, he begged her to remain.

The sun proclaimed the noon lunch hour, when she finally took from Mr. Sutherland the volume of poems which he had been reading aloud.

"Good-bye," laughed Molle and was instantly lost to view among the trees.

Though the rector arose in quest of her, Molle was gone. Which branching path she had chosen he did not know. But he went back to his seat beneath the oak to sit again and dream of her. Then at last, Eleanor brought Molle's fascinating game to an unexpected end.

"Mr. Sutherland, the rector is coming to dinner at five tonight," she said.

"I cannot be back from our motor trip until six. Be here to welcome him, Molle, and do make a pleasant impression, dear. Mr. Sutherland's opinion is worth while."

Molle sighed. So she was to have no memory romance after all, and to the man she would be but a common place girl, in a commonplace modern home.

Freda was admiring the tall figure of the rector as she reached the foot of the stairs. It was impossible for Molle to retreat. In desperation she slipped into a hall closet beneath the stairs.

Molle knew after a suffocating lapse in the closet that he had made himself comfortable for a long while. Hopefully Molle fumbled along the wall finding there evidently a muddle of velveting apron. Frantically she stuffed her hair into the stretched apron's crown, her feet, sandals and all, went into the shoes, then Molle opened the closet door.

The rector stared and Molle stared at a reflection of herself in the mirror. Freda's borrowed apron was far from clean. Molle's hair was escaping from Freda's cap. Speechlessly, she fled up the stairs.

It was Freda who knocked presently at Molle's door.

"That man," she said, disgustedly, "says he must speak to 'other maid.' He don't believe me that I'm the only maid. You go tell him."

With the brighter light of table and desk still in her eyes, Molle came, very neatly dressed, down the stairs. Eleanor returning later, was astonished to hear her rector happily pronouncing:

Honor is John Wesley's.

The name "Methodist" was first applied to Charles Wesley, and not to Mr. Wesley, the real founder of Methodism. And it was applied as a term of ridicule, or as an epithet, since Wesley was a student at Oxford, where, as he says, he began to practice the method of study prescribed by the university. He must have been a stickler for "method," for he was always using the word. "This ruined me the nickname of Methodized," he says in one of his letters.

GROWING DEMAND FOR COTTAGE CHEESE

Making Cottage Cheese.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Much cottage cheese was eaten last year, because it saved meat. The campaign to increase its use was carried on in every state. This year, because they have learned to like this dairy product, people want to know more of the manufacture and use of cottage cheese. Statewide work for this purpose is being carried on again in Iowa, Michigan, Kansas, and Utah. In those states the home manufacture of cottage cheese and butter, when conditions warrant, will be encouraged by the state and federal dairy authorities, and efforts to increase the general use of cottage cheese will be made.

In New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island, educational work to teach housewives the value of skimmed milk products is being carried on in the cities. The places where the women demonstrators are endeavoring to create a demand are situated where there is usually a surplus of skim milk. Dairy specialists will also help the milkmen in their efforts to manufacture cottage cheese of extra quality.

WASTE OF MUCH TIME AND MONEY WHEN POOR DRESS MATERIAL IS REMODELED

It is a Waste of Time and Good Dye to Attempt to Color Some Garments.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

"It's all very well," said Mrs. Stanton, "to talk about mending over clothes, but I haven't found that it pays at all."

As Mrs. Stanton leaned forward to answer, the other women of the club leaned back comfortably in their rocking chairs to enjoy more fully this discussion of clothes, the subject so dear to every feminine heart.

"You and I surely have had different results than everything I am wearing today has been made over or at least changed. In some way from its original style, and I am sure this suit and blouse are wearing as well as any I might have bought this spring," Mrs. Stanton answered.

"What makes the difference? Your clothes look wonderfully well and those which I have remodeled have that rather uniform, make-over look at first, and show worn places and holes before I have worn them more than a month or so?"

Good Workmanship Counts.

"Perhaps it is because, while I pay fewer clothes than you, I get better material in the first place and always take better care of them than you do. You know you are always looking for bargains and realize that buying cheap things does away with the necessity of brushing, cleaning regularly, and brushing up your clothes carefully, as I do mine."

"I remember, when I bought this suit, there was another one which I liked almost as well for less money, but, since I realized the material in it would look shabby by the end of one year's service, I decided on this one. I wore this one quite steadily for two years and then remade it this spring. It certainly will wear another year. In the meantime, I have enjoyed wearing the suit because I have always felt well-dressed and comfortable when I had it on. The happy combination of good material and good workmanship showed in it and I have been contented to get along without some other clothes I might otherwise have been tempted into buying."

"Well, perhaps that is true of your suit, but I doubt whether you have better material in that blouse you have on than there was in the one I attempted to dye. It was unskirted colored, done in that gay embroidery such as everyone was wearing a year ago. I was tired and sick of it, though it was not in the least shabby, so I thought I'd color it. As soon as I put it in water, all the different colors used in the embroidery started running and the result is a smeared rainbow effect."

Startling Colors Under Suspicion.

"That brings up a point I intended to mention. We, with limited clothes allowances, can't afford to buy clothes that are in good style perhaps, but extreme. Startling colors and extreme fashions are not allowed in my wife's rule, for they are always expensive and seldom remain in good taste for any length of time."

"In the library the other day, I found a letter. I'm sure you would like," she added, turning to the group as a whole, "for every word in it is valuable. One thing I remember, was to remodel only when the material has enough wear in it to warrant the necessary work and cost of new material. The librarian told me we could get copies from the home demonstration agent. I would suggest that we get copies for discussion at some future meeting and have the demonstrator talk to us about it."

"These women are not more interested in clothes and how to get value received from them than thousands of others are. All will want the booklet, 'Wise Spending Saves Clothing for the Family,' together with the other leaflets which the United States department of agriculture will send free on request. They will help you solve many questions."

OF INTEREST to the HOUSEWIFE

Try orange peels and grated. This flavors delightfully.

A piece of velvet pasted inside heel of shoes will prevent wear on the stockings.

Have heels built up as soon as they wear off, otherwise the entire shoe soon gets out of shape.

It is said that the flavor of shrimp is improved if boiling water is poured over them shortly before they are to be served. But be sure and immediately drain it off.
